

compilations vol 1, december 2007

A GIFT TO THE HENNATRIBE
COMMUNITY

Contributors

Tammi Boudreau, aka Henna Bee, was introduced to henna 5 years ago and was hooked. She has been hennaing professionally for the last two. Besides henna she enjoys photography, gardening, baking and all sorts of music. Her dream vacation would be to Scotland. Tammi currently lives in Canada with her husband and 3 kids. Visit her website at www.hennabee.com

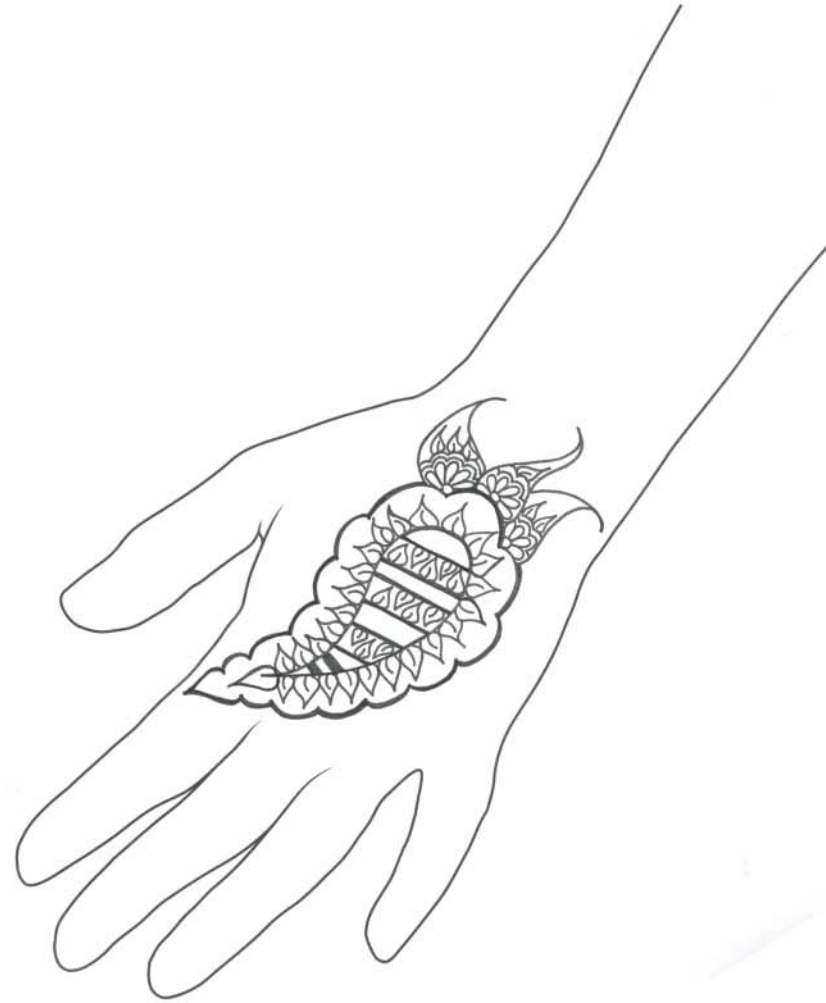

Jazibe Molina has been playing with henna for about 8 years. She has been a professional henna artist and supplier on and off during that time, concentrating in the spanish-speaking market. She has an MFA in Graphic Design and has often incorporated henna into her work, as a medium and as a subject. She has plans to design and build the most comprehensive henna website in spanish in 2008, under the name hennaritual.com. She currently lives in Switzerland with her husband, where she works as a freelance designer. www.jazibe.com

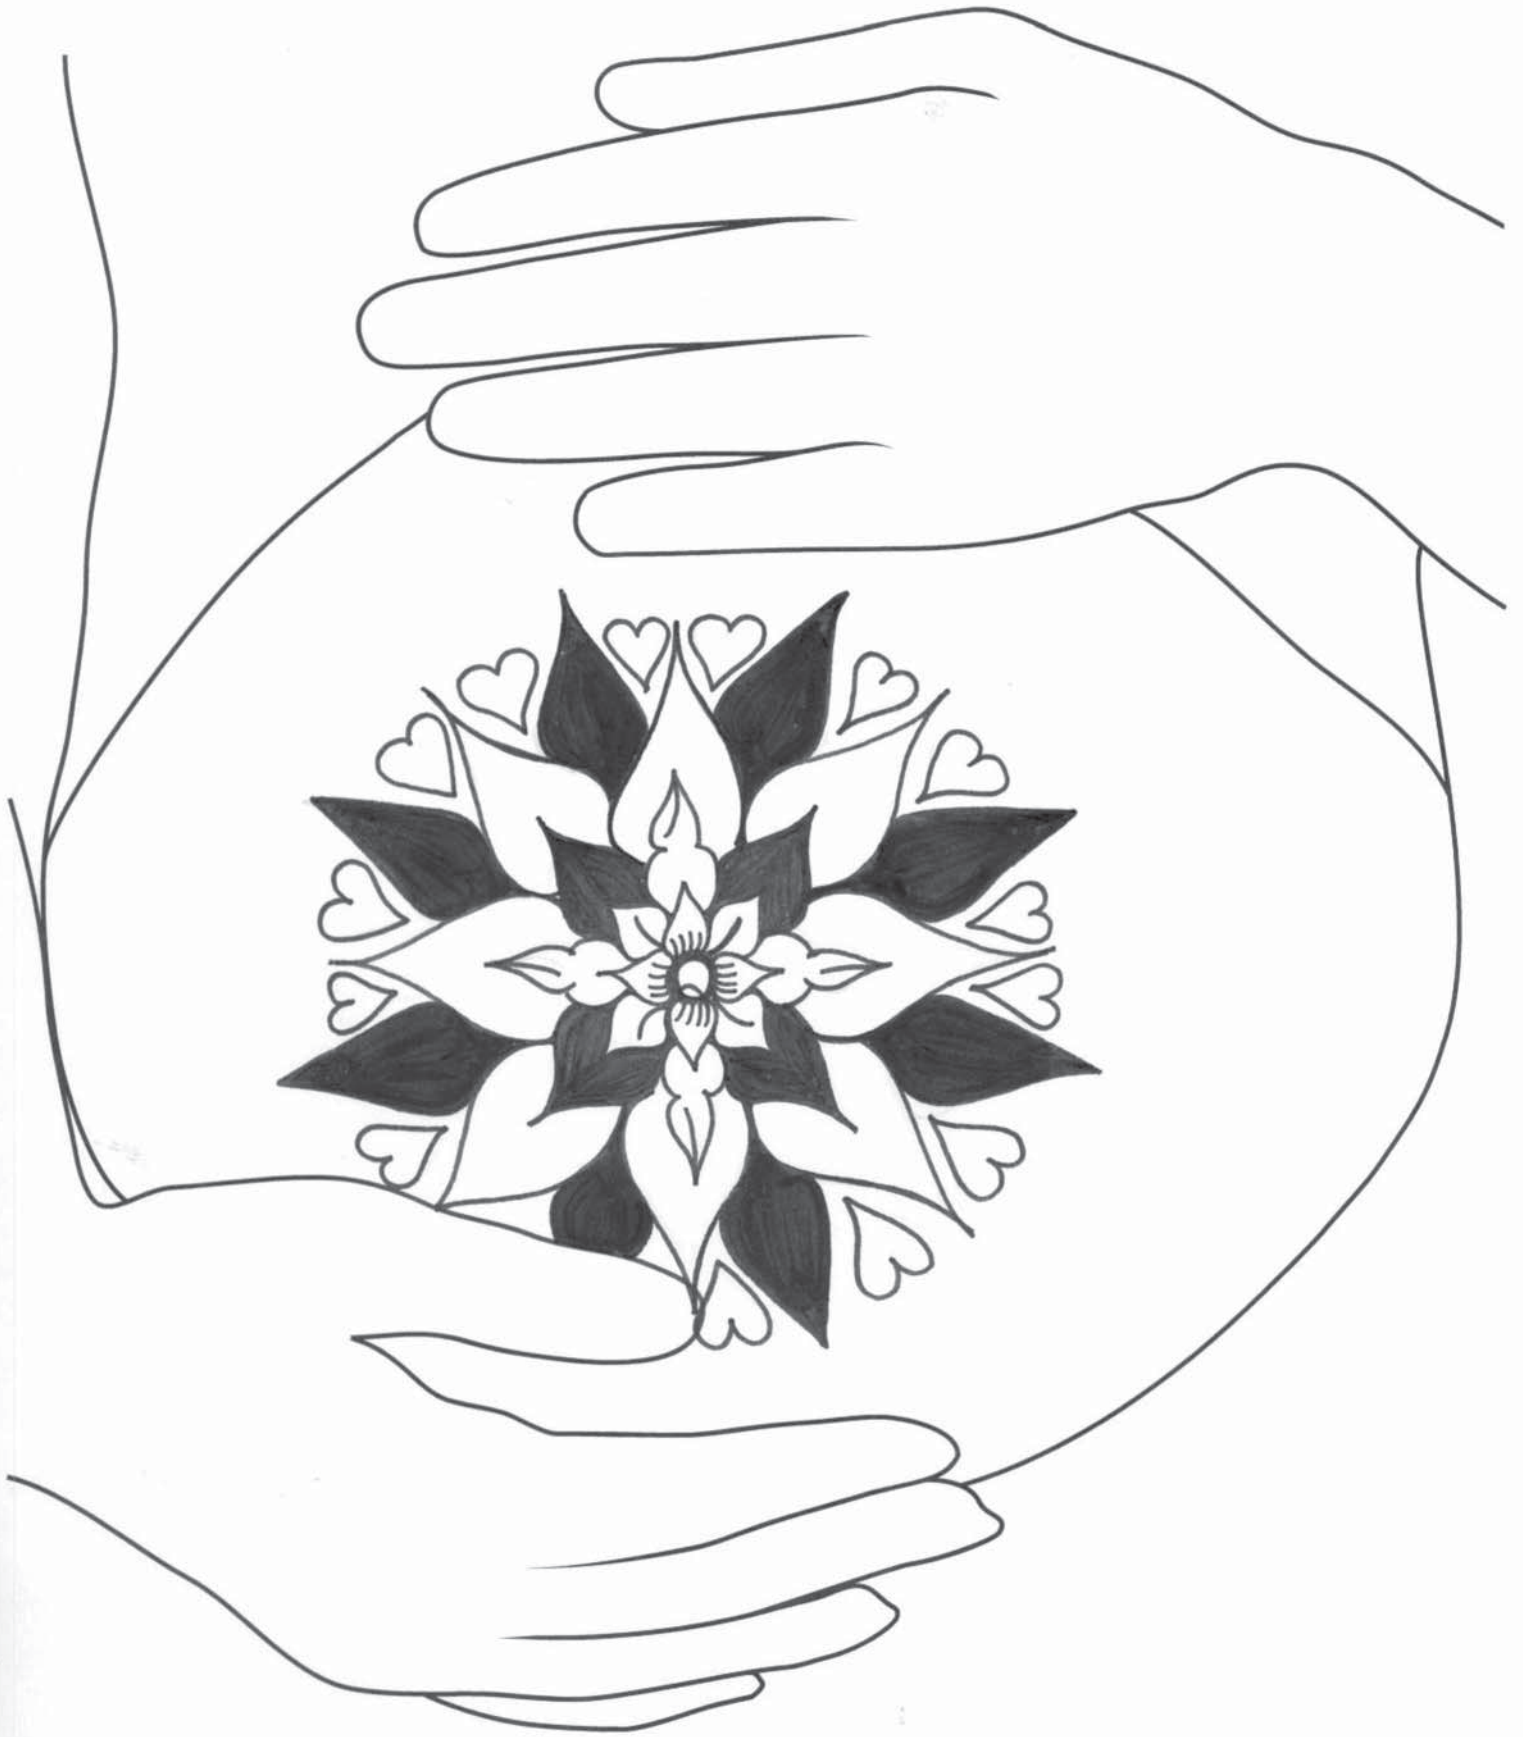

Jen Schafer, AKA Jenianne, discovered henna as a children's librarian when she was planning a program for teens, and fell in love with the art. Later she was invited to present the idea to other librarians all over the state. Rather than using what she taught them, most of them invited her to come present at their libraries. Pretty soon Jen was spending more time doing henna than being a librarian! Eventually she gave up the librarian part and became a full time henna artist. Jen started Body Art by Jen in 2000, and since then she has changed the name to Henna Muse and have begun offering supplies as well as her services as an artist. Visit HennaMuse.com to find articles, video demos, recipes, essential oils, gilding paste, swarovski crystals, glitter, at least 3 kinds of henna, cosmetic mica, hard to find paste ingredients and much more. Go check it out!

After dabbling in henna and the arts for years, Darcy Vasudev went pro in 2004. Specializing in traditional and modern Indian bridal henna, she also enjoys doing henna for baby showers, Bat Mitzvahs, or just for fun. Darcy has been featured in several television interviews with Voice of America, and CBS News. She has contributed photographs and information to magazine articles for Nirvana Woman Magazine, Serendib (the in-flight magazine of Sri Lanka Airlines) and Nirali Magazine. She has published one henna ebook and has several more in the works. Darcy can be found at weddings, special events and festivals throughout the San Francisco Bay Area. She also takes private appointments at her home studio. Her small brush with fame was the opportunity to henna actress Michelle Pfeiffer. When not decorating people, decorates wedding cakes with mehndi-like designs, does henna workshops, and runs an online henna supply business! Somehow, she still manages to find time to travel, especially to places that have inspiring artwork! Check her out at www.hennalounge.com

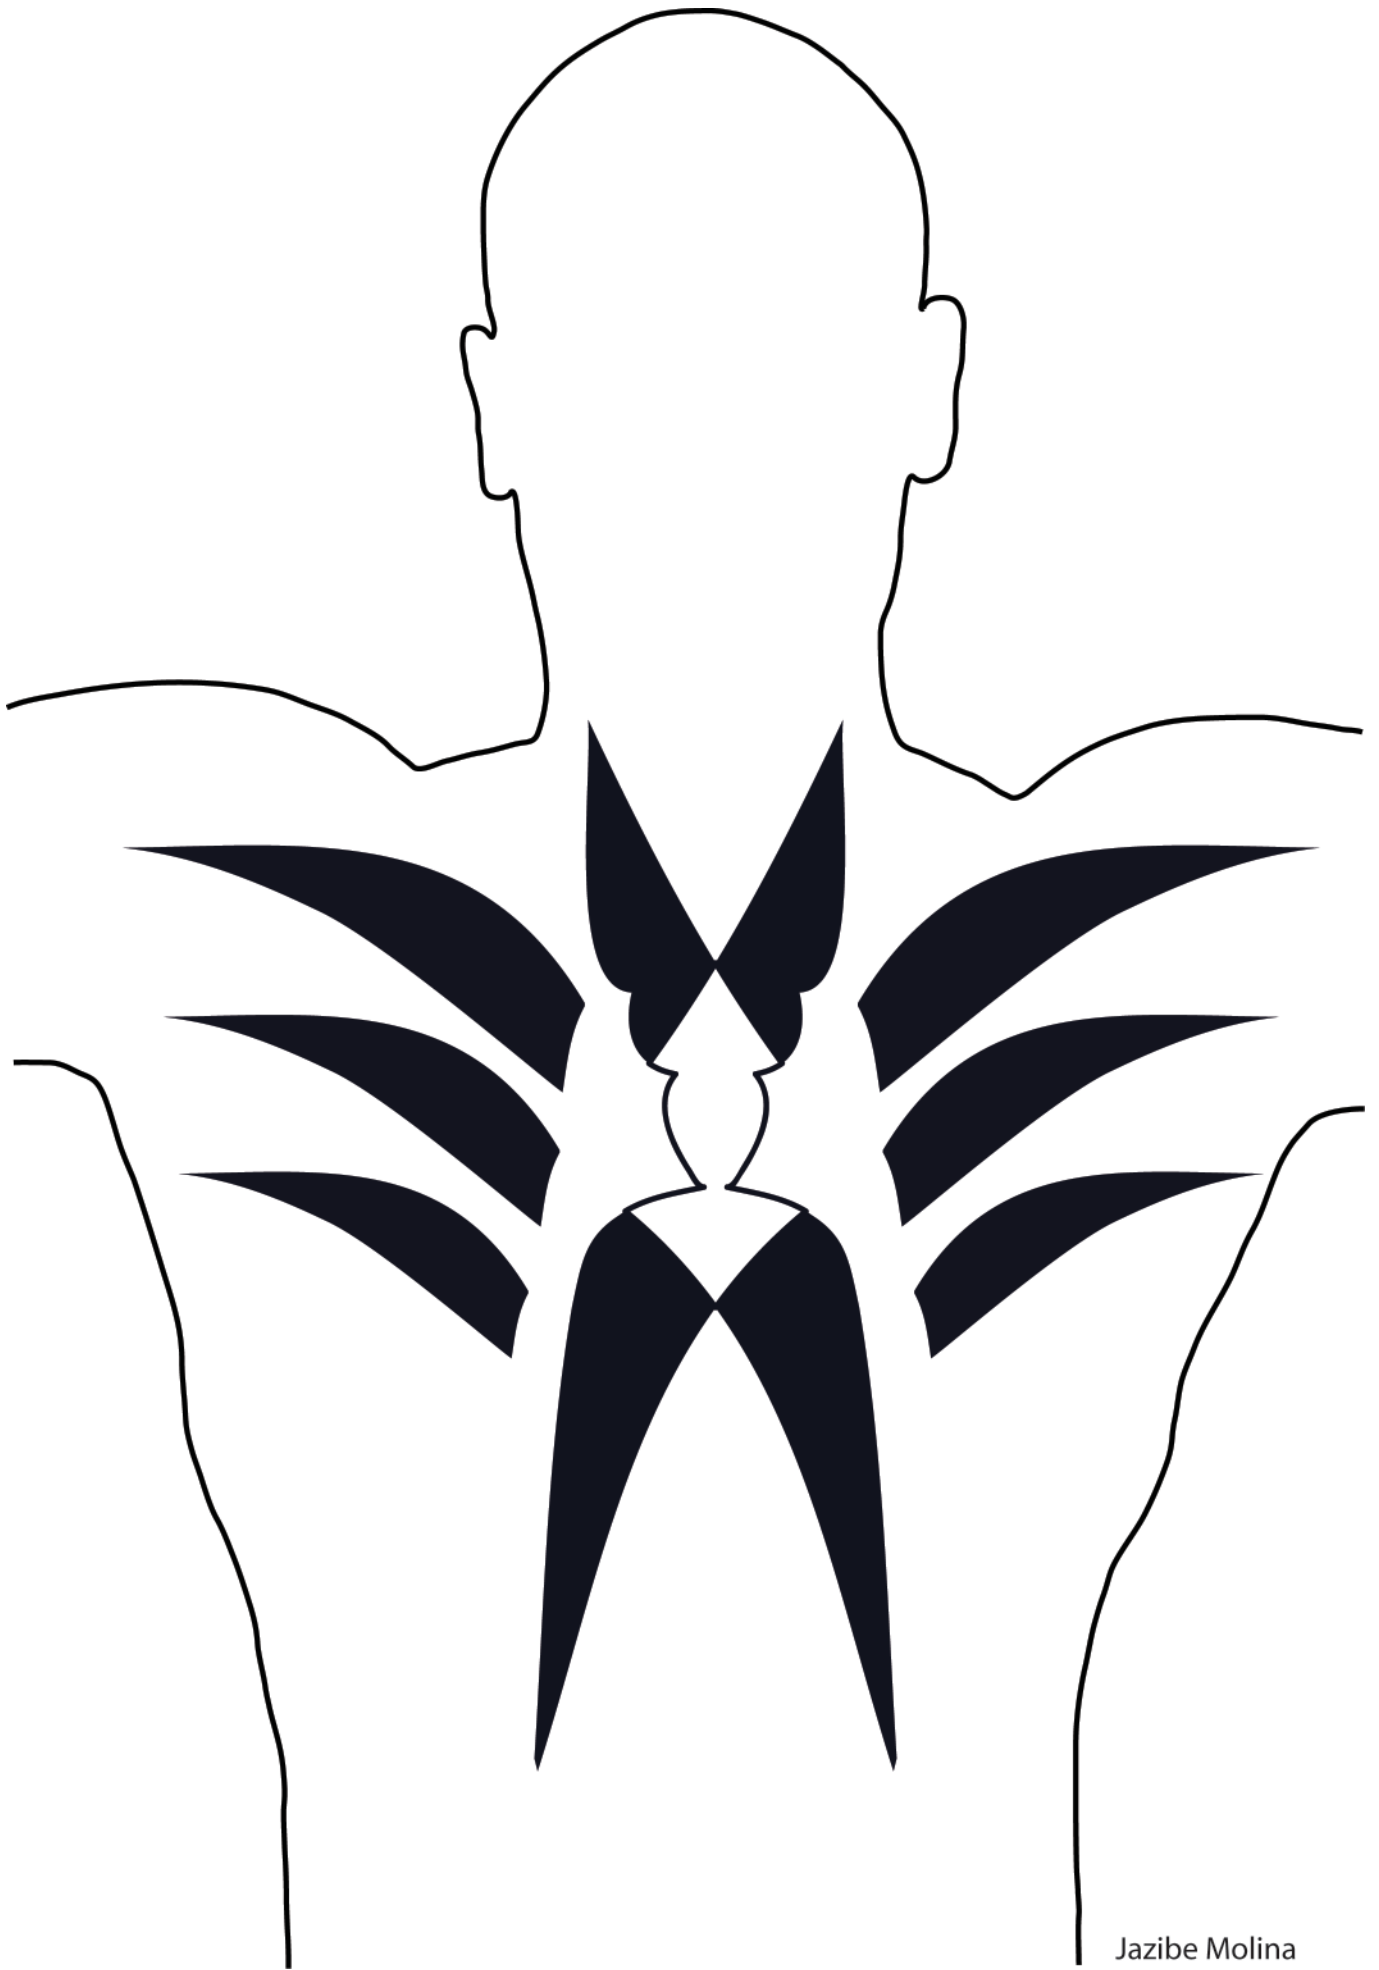

Patricia Volckaert, aka Arca, has worked with henna for 3 years. Before learning the art of henna she studied drawing and graphic design for 7 years, so this addition to her skills has become a natural progression and a new way to express her creativity. She loves to work with indian and gulf style designs but is always interested in discovering new patterns. She works in the North of France and Paris, and has been published in a french magazine called 'Gazelle Mag'. Visit her website at arcagraphie.free.fr/sitehenna

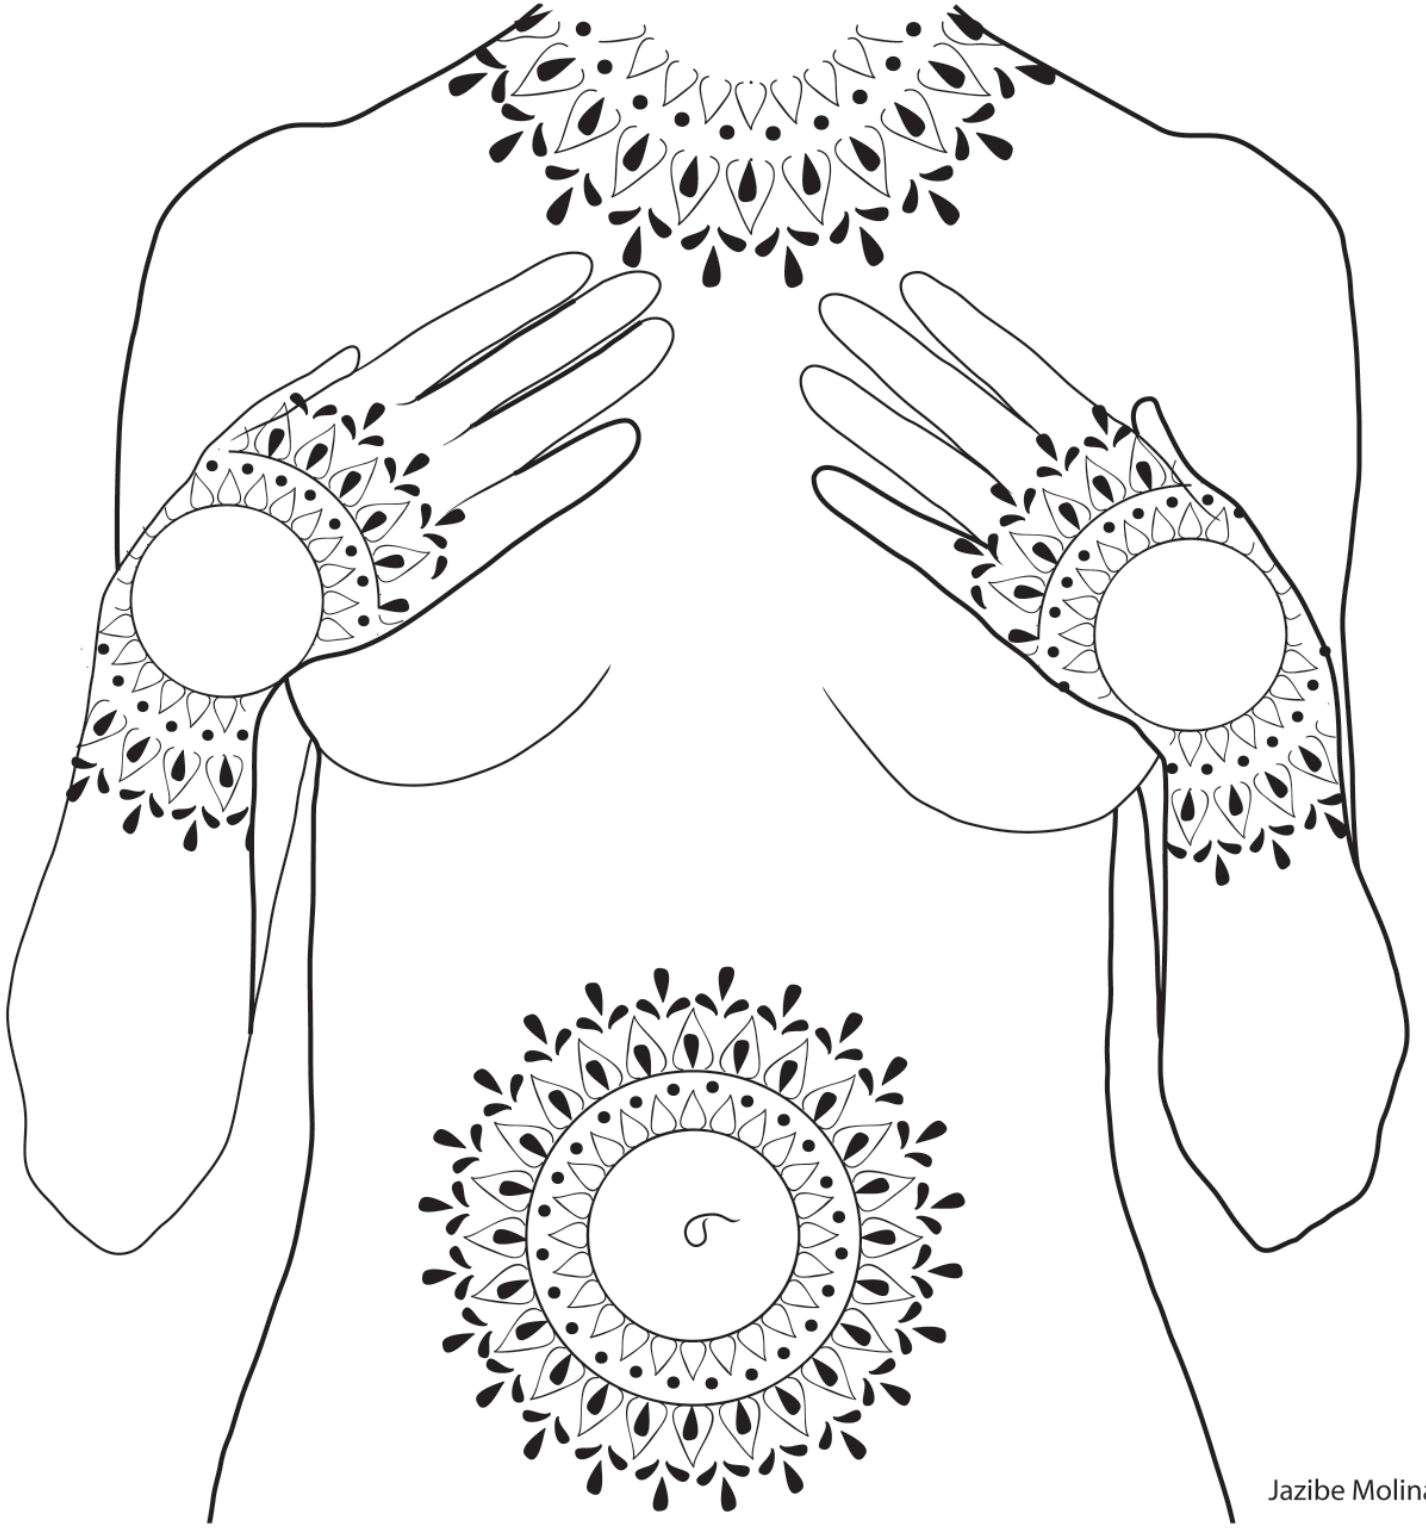

Cover: Henna and photo by Debra Reiser - www.hennacrone.com, artwork by Jazibe Molina

Jazibe Molina

